Dubbed "The Negotiator" by ColoradoBiz Magazine, Melissa Kuipers Blake is a leading lobbyist and seasoned political strategist with more than 18 years of national legislative experience. Melissa leads negotiations for her clients between members of the Colorado Senate, House of Representatives and Governor and is known for her issue knowledge, political strategy development and campaign fundraising prowess. When it comes to behind the scenes negotiations and issue development, Melissa is second to none. Melissa also serves as chair of the firm's Emerging Regulated Industries (ERI) practice group which assists state and local governments and employers throughout the country as they navigate the complex world of medical and recreational marijuana legalization. Having worked in Colorado politics since day one of recreational marijuana legalization, Melissa has a unique perspective on the industry and regularly shares that expertise with those entities impacted by marijuana from a statutory, regulatory, compliance and workplace perspective.

At the core of Melissa's government relations practice is her reputation for integrity, honesty and professionalism. Melissa is a close and trusted confidante to a number of key members of the House and Senate, as well as several statewide elected officials. She can often be found in the war rooms of multiple campaigns and has helped influence the outcome of many elections through her advice and strategy development. While Melissa's influence in the halls of the Colorado Capitol is extensive, she also maintains significant federal relationships on Capitol Hill with several U.S. senators and members of the House of Representatives from all parts of the country.

Melissa regularly provides commentary to state and local media on a variety of legislative issues and is often tapped to speak at state and national conferences to share her political and legislative endeavors. She is widely recognized by local and national media for her government relations successes, including being named one of the Denver Business Journal's "Top Forty under 40" at the age of 29, being named a Rising Star in 5280 Magazine's 2014 list of the most powerful people in Denver, being picked as a Top 25 Young Professional by ColoradoBiz Magazine in 2015 and, most recently, being named a Top Lawyer in Government Relations/Lobbying in 5280 Magazine's 2016 and 2017 Top Lawyer's List.

Prior to joining Brownstein, Melissa was the vice president of Government Relations and Communications for the Colorado Automobile Dealers Association, where she represented 270 new franchised auto dealers in Colorado. Prior to her work with the automobile industry, Melissa served as the legislative director for the Colorado Trial Lawyers Association, was a legislative aide in the Florida Senate and worked for several years in the Florida Legislature for the Rubin Group, based in Ft. Lauderdale.

In her own time, Melissa serves as the CEO of Baking for the Troops, a Colorado-based non-profit which prepares and sends homemade care packages of baked goods to members of the U.S. military deployed throughout the world. Since Melissa founded the organization in 2009, she and her team of volunteers have sent more than 2,000 boxes of cards and baked goods to military personnel in countless regions of the globe, including Afghanistan and Iraq.
