Dulcinea Hanuschak practices natural resources law, with a particular focus on water and environmental litigation and transactions. She represents municipal, corporate, non-profit, and individual clients in administrative proceedings, litigation, and appeals in both state and federal court and in water contract negotiations. She has provided legal representation in water, public land, and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) cases. Dulcinea practices Colorado water law regularly on both the front range and western slope.

Prior to joining the firm, Dulcinea practiced law at Hinkle, Hensley, Shanor & Martin in Santa Fe, New Mexico. She also served as a law clerk at Trout, Raley, Montano, Witwer & Freeman; and at White & Jankowski; and as an intern at Colorado Water Trust in Denver, CO.
