

Top Issues for New Administration - Marijuana Policy
Dec 15, 2016

Podcast

Brownstein Podcast Series, December 15, 2016

Following the 2016 elections, there are many unanswered questions about what issues will dominate the agenda for our new president and Congress. In an eight-part podcast series, Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck's Washington, D.C., policy professionals and attorneys discuss their perspectives on the biggest issues facing the next administration. Brownstein's strategic advisors Barry Jackson and former Sen. Mark Begich moderate bipartisan discussions on the first 100 days of Trump's presidency as well as pressing issues such as immigration, health care, financial services, tax and trade, education, infrastructure and marijuana policy.

In this episode, Shareholder Will Moschella discusses how the Republican Congress and new administration could approach marijuana policy in light of increasing public support and successful state legalization.

To listen to the full Brownstein Government Relations Podcast Series, click here.

Meet The Team

William E. Moschella	Shareholder	T 202.652.2346	wmoschella@bhfs.com
----------------------	-------------	----------------	---------------------

Related Practices

- Government Relations