Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck reports $6,250,000 for its second-quarter 2015 federal lobbying revenues, a 7.2 percent increase over both the first quarter of 2015 and year-over-year.

“Clients continue to seek out Brownstein for our subject-matter expertise and reach on the Hill,” said Marc Lampkin, managing partner of Brownstein’s Washington, D.C., office. “We had a stellar second quarter with a 7.2 percent jump and nine new registrations. We saw an uptick in EB-5, biotech, transportation and tribal matters.”

The numbers for the second quarter of 2015 will be filed on July 20 as part of the quarterly filing requirements under the federal Lobbying Disclosure Act.
