Tony Arias is a member of Brownstein's Litigation Department. A skilled legal writer and effective manager, Tony brings precision to his commercial litigation practice.

Tony was a summer associate before joining the firm as a law clerk during his last semester of law school, gaining experience in legal research and drafting memoranda and pleadings on various litigation matters. He got his start in the legal field as a supervisor and lead paralegal at a Denver-area litigation firm. While in law school, Tony interned with Judge Morris B. Hoffman in the Second Judicial District and with U.S. District Court Judge Christine Arguello. Tony graduated Order of the Coif in the top five percent of his class.

Tony is fluent in English and Spanish and has experience translating for attorneys and individuals in need of legal assistance. He also drafted an award-winning memo for the Anti-Defamation League, participated in local flood relief efforts and organized a neighborhood cleanup project in Evansville, Indiana.
