Brownstein Client Alert, November 9, 2016

Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck's bipartisan team of lobbyists and lawyers has a proven track record of successfully navigating the maze of politics and policy in Washington, D.C. Our team has analyzed the results of last night's historic election and we are sharing our early insights in the attached 2016 Post Election Outlook. Our analysis provides a one-stop shop for the presidential and congressional outcomes, as well as forecasts for new party and committee leadership based on the results.

Brownstein is uniquely positioned to help its clients navigate this dynamic period of transition. Unlike other firms in Washington, Brownstein prides itself on being able to help our clients manage any political environment successfully. We take a bipartisan approach to each issue to ensure our clients are always covered.

Our Republican team has significant relationships across both chambers and party leadership, as well as those who will steer the incoming Trump administration. Marc Lampkin, managing partner of Brownstein's Washington, D.C. office, was named by POLITICO as a "need to know" K Street Power Player inside the Trump transition. This powerhouse of Republicans also includes a former chairman of the Republican National Committee, former Bush administration officials and former staff to Republican leadership, including House Speaker John Boehner's (R-OH) former chief of staff, House Majority Whip Kevin McCarthy's (R-CA) former senior advisor and U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch's (R-UT) former chief counsel at the Senate Judiciary Committee. Other members of our team have also been active advisors to the Trump transition team.

Likewise, our Democratic team includes former U.S. Sen. Mark Begich from Alaska, former senior advisors and chiefs of staff for senior Senate members, legislative directors and staff on key House and Senate committees, including Banking, Judiciary, Energy, Natural Resources and Commerce, as well as former administration officials at the U.S. Treasury Department and Office of Management and Budget.

Take this opportunity to read our 2016 Post Election Outlook and tap into the knowledge of our team who have served at the highest levels of government, as elected officials and as senior advisors to some of the country's most distinguished public officials. We possess the creativity, know-how and tenacity to garner results. A single political decision at any level of government can impact an entire industry. Playing an active role in the decision-making process is no longer a luxury—it's imperative.

Please contact a member of Brownstein's Government Relations team to discuss how we can help when the stakes are high.
